Details

If we have the chance to travel around the world then some fragrances lock themselves in our memory and are forever associated with places we have been. These are just a few Corfu, Greece - Colourful flowers, wild herbs and the scent of night jasmine. The Cotswolds, England - A walled garden full of English fragrant roses, delphiniums and stocks. Bali, Indonesia - The ground strewn with perfect frangipani flowers that had fallen from the trees. The perfume was exquisite. Isle of Arran, Scotland - Memories of the many wild flowers and in the late summer the wild honeysuckle hedges and the fresh perfume of heather. Hawaii, USA - Palm trees waved in the distance and the smell of coconut sailed through the air whether it is sun tan lotion, cocktails otr the air, the smell of coconut can take you to any tropical paraduise. Provence, France - Lavender heads so tall and so blue, dancing in the breeze, the airy perfume with its woody undertones delightful and calming. Jaipur, India - India is a feast for all the senses, Chillies, cinnamon, ginger, saffron, the colours were so vivid and fragrances so potent. Dubai, Saudi Arabia - In the old town you will see the many perfume stores and will smell the distinct aroma of Oud, a strong scent portraying opulence and mystery. Jamaica, West Indies - Music is coming from a small café and as you soak up the unique atmosphere that is Jamaica a hypnotizing infusion floats in the air, the scent of freshly ground coffee beans and a dusting of the finest smooth cocoa. Seville, Spain - A visit to Spain in Springtime is a joy and as you walk through the old streets of Seville the orange trees sway majestically as they infuse the air with the heavenly scent of orange blossom, light and fragrant... Thailand - Fresh Lemongrass, light and refreshing is the overwhelming fragrance rising from the cooking and the very essence of the buildings. Tuscany, Italy - When the olive blossom has faded, the dominant scent in the olive grove is once again a strong, minty fragrance, rosemary and sage grow everywhere as the trees bring forth their fruit.
